All the Nes Perces save the Lawyer Those who came into council refused to abide by the treaties of 1855, and Stevens was compelled to abandon their country, and was attacked by them while retreating. The same is true with most of Steptoe's command. The Indians now have complete possession of the whole country north and east of the John Day's River, save one block house in the Wala Wala Valley held and defended by about 50 men. It is quiet questionable whether or not this can long be held against the enemy. We learn that Steptoe will proceed to relieve this post as soon as he can make arrangements for the orage of his animals.

> Gen. Wool retains his quarters in Benevia, Cal., and exhibits no active policy towards the subjection of these hostile tribes The occasion may arise when the hardy sons of Oregon will have again to take the field. We learn that old John, who with his band are on the coast reserve, says that when he came there he was tired of the war, and was close tum tum, but now his heart is getting muddy. He says that he has never yet been conquered; that he has whipped Capt. Smith once and can do it gain, and that if he gets tired of the reserve he will take the Captain's arms and his band will go through the Williamette Valley to his home.

> Mysterious Disappearance,-Lieut. Miller, of the 9th Regiment, U. S. A., left the Cascades, on Tuesday evening, on the steamer Mary, in command of a detachment of United States troops, for the Dalles. When the boat arrived at the Dalles, Lieut. Miller could not be found. We understand the passage was made in the night and without landing. It is feared he either fell overboard accidental's, or jumped overboard and was drowned.—Oregonian, 4th of Oct.

DROWNED .- Two young ladies, Miss Bailey, daughter f Isaac Bailey, of Myrtle Creek, Douglas county, and Miss Briggs, daughter of S. S. Briggs, Esq., of Canonville, in said county, were drowned on the 23d ult., by wind the upsetting of a canoe, while they, in company with four others, two ladies and two gentlen, en, were endeavoring to cross Cow Creek, in Lower Oow Creek Valley. The whole party had been attending Mrs Vanderbosh's school, and at the time of the accident were returning

The New British Minister to the United States. The Liverpool Journal of September 6th, thus nictures the new British Minister at Washington : It is emphatically and even eloquently argued, that one of the first statesmen of the age - (is Lord John Russell giving the hint-is his lordship going in for every vacancy, bishopries included)should be selected to "represent us" (us!) at Naples. But no one cares who goes to Washington; and it is of that apathy my Lord Clarendon takes advantage, in pitching upon his used-up brother, C. Pelman Villiers, for the important post (assuming that the statement that C. P. V. is the man, is well founded). Mr. Villiers has scarcely energy enough to put on his clothes, apparently not to put them off again; and it is marvellous how even put them off again; and it is marvellous how even a family government can trust this younger brother in the complications of Yankee politics, which any day may produce a new difficulty. He is a very clever man, and singularly free from the airs and cant of his class; and that he descrees well of and cant of his class; and that he deserves well of his country, no one who remembers his free trade eareer will dispute. Why he has chosen so long to be content with the Judge Advocateship, it is impossible to tell, except by reference to his known indolence. We should all be glad to see him in a high and eminent place, his ambition and his patriotism amply gratified. But Washington is scarcely the place for a statesman who began as a man about town, took the intermediate course of philosophy, and has for some time settled down as a cynic, careless as to cravats and hair-brushes, and appearances of all sorts-public appearances inclusive. He'd drive the earnest Yankees francic with his indifferentism. If they showed him Bunker Hill, he would put up his glass and ask who was Bunker, and what was done on the Hill? He would be profoundly amazed at the frenzy of their passionate politics, and they would stare at his dandy different features. He would call slaves slaves, and ask if the institution had not an unpleasant and supported him until assistance was received from the days' sight to Mr. J. H. Wood; the consideration mischief by never reading any dispatch at all. He about eight feet above water, and about one eighth of a mile would say to his secretary, "Good gracious! I, who know Clarendon, to read anything he writes!" 31 If there were an Oregon Territory now he would say, "Gentlemen, Oregon is a bore; take it all." He would not object to an expedition to Cuba. He would merely observe, "Only take care that you hight " " 3 . @ 3 50 does like a good eight; and the only clear instrucdon't spoil the tobacco in marching, for Clarendon let alone policy might do very well in diplomacy. 1 50 a 1 75 tles, and himself never drew a sword or fired a masket in any one of them. In the same way Lord Derby, when Minister, would have ruined the country, only for his affecting indolence Next to the advantage of having no Minister at Washington, it might on that principle be desirable to have Villiers, who, though there, will do nothing.

We stated a few days ago, the probability that the Hon. Mr. Villiers would be the next ambassador from Great Britain to the United States. We Canada and Brit. North. Acc. Prev. believe there is now no doubt that such will be the Great Britan, Ireland and Scotland .... case. We have reason to know that Mr. Villiers Bremen, Hamburg and German States*... 5 32 has accepted the appointment. The Hon. Charles Russia Field d, &c.*................................ 5 39 Pelham Villiers, though said to be of a very indo-lent nature, is a man of remarkable ability, strong intelligence and most courtly grace and gentl-ness of manner. Except that he is careless in dress, he bears a singular resemblance to his brother Lord Clarendon, having his peculiar liquid blue eye and expression of languid courtliness. Like forwarded — excepting letters for Great Britain, Mr. Crampton he is a bachelor. Before receiving which, if desired, will be sent in a sealed bag through his present office of Judge Advocate, he was an the United States, and only Hawaiian and Sea postable debater and an active committee man in the age collected, viz. : House of Commons. His annual motions on the corn laws first wakened that public opinion in England which swept them down, and in the agitation and advocacy of the ballot, he has always taken an eager part. Since his appointment he has been doomed to the lucrative taciturnity of the Treasury bench, but his views have always been of a breadth of freedom approaching, if not touching, republicanism.—Ilid.
